

Tool 11: Intersectional reflection on allyship video

This tool helps you to reflect on allyship as a mode of intersectional practice.

Watch the video below:

Reflective questions:

- > What stood out to you about the video?
- > How is allyship different to advocacy?
- > How does allyship fit with intersectional principles?

You may find these thoughts from those who took part in the Change Project helpful:

- > 'Advocacy is about using voice; allyship adds using power and privilege.'
- > 'Empathy underpins allyship.'
- > 'Allyship relies on the pillars of intersectionality – situated knowledge, curiosity, willingness to take action about injury.'
- > 'We are all intersectional beings; we can all learn from other people; we cannot be allies without intersectionality; we need to understand the situated knowledge.'
